

This is the format for the PDF version of the Aeromilitaria Index, as proposed by Roger Stokes on 22 Apr 2012.

It is intended for users who require a simple readable index similar to that already promulgated via the AB-IX file area.

This example contains a complete set of records for the issues of Aeromilitaria from Spring 1985 to Spring 2013. All entries are in the new format and order.

The index records are presented in a number of groups to assist user in finding the information that they require. The top level groups currently used are:

- Items that refer to individual types of aircraft.

- Items whose primary focus is the forces operating the aircraft

- Items whose primary focus is the type of operation or the area of operations

- Items whose primary focus is operating aircraft from ships

- Items whose primary focus is a particular location

- Items covering the technology considered for, or used in, aircraft, aero engine and weapon designs, and radio or radar systems

- Items covering national policy and requirements

- Miscellaneous items

- Book reviews

Items are ordered within each group using the ASCII collating sequence.

The items that refer to individual aircraft have been organised so that entries for the same basic aircraft type appear together even when the type is known by multiple names or designations.

Broadly UK aircraft types are sorted by the basic type name and US aircraft types are sorted by the basic military aircraft designation, with priority given to the Air Force designation when multi-service designations apply.

The entries in column 2 indicate the type of material presented in Aeromilitaria.

Black and white half-tone photographs are indicated by 'Photo.bw' and colour photos are indicated by 'Photo.c'.

The date in column 3 is intended to indicate the period to which the information refers, or the date at which a photo was taken. Some of the dates are approximations when the requisite information was not available in item in Aeromilitaria. The dates should be sufficiently accurate to allow uses to find items, especially photos, which refer to a period of interest.

Columns 4, 5 and 6 point to the page in Aeromilitaria where the information is located.

Multi-page items are referenced by their first page.

From 1999 onwards, the edition in column 5 is encoded as:

- 1 = Spring

- 2 = Summer

- 3 = Autumn

- 4 = Winter

The following contents list gives the page number for the start of the index entries for each group of information.
