

AIRCRAFT CRASHES IN THE EAST MIDLANDS 1914-2018, EXCLUDING LINCOLNSHIRE T. N. Hancock

As a retired librarian I have long been aware that all aspects of local history should be recorded for the benefit of future generations and this is my attempt to cover just one of those aspects; it will surprize many people to know that a minimum of some 2,000 aircraft have crashed and been 'written-off (eg, did not fly again) in the East Midland counties of Derbyshire (DE), Leicestershire (LE), Northamptonshire (NR), Nottinghamshire (NT) and Rutland (RU) since powered flight began and this list attempts to give the bare details of these - it should be emphasised that these are the crashes that resulted in the aircraft being destroyed, NOT those, of which there many, which crash-landed, were salvaged by 58 Maintenance Unit based at Newark NT or 65 MU at Blaby Wharf LE, were repaired at civilian repair factories such as Auster at Rearsby LE, Brooklands Aviation at Sywell NR, or Fields at Tollerton NT, and flew again. I use the words 'this list attempts to give' advisedly as the recording of these crashes was down, quite frequently, to the whim of an RAF clerk who may have made mistakes in locations and other details.

It is intended that this list will give a basis for further research to those interested in a particular crash. Newspaper reports on wartime crashes are rare but those in peacetime may carry an account in the local press. Each entry gives the aircraft's serial number, its type, its unit and that unit's home airfield (with the county) and the number of fatal casualties if known; it should be remembered that a great many young airmen died in these crashes (signified [where known] by a number followed by 'k' after the appropriate entry) often in horrific circumstances and also, occasionally, civilians on the ground ( shown as '+' after the aircrew deaths). Civilian aircraft have their registration, type and location of crash given. The full history of aviation in Leics can be found in 'Aviation in Leicestershire and Rutland' by R. Bonser, in Northants in 'Aviation in Northamptonshire' by M. Gibson, and in Rutland in 'Wings over Rutland' by J. Rennison. Crashes in the Soke of Peterborough, which was part of Northamptonshire until June 1965 when it was moved into Huntingdonshire, are included until that month. Lincolnshire has been excluded from this work because there were some 3,000 crashes in that county, warranting a list of its own.

SOURCES

This list is compiled from the information given in many books published by Air-Britain Historians Ltd, and the volumes of 'Bomber Command Losses' by W. R. Chorley, published by Midland Books. R.Cawsey's 'Fatal Air crashes' is very useful for WW1 but it should be noted that these are fatal crashes, not the many in which the crew survived. Two web-sites also proved very useful for the American WW2 crashes - accident-report.com and www.aviationarchaeology.com.

APPENDICES

These may be found at the end of the list and are an aircraft type index, a geographical location index and a list of the abbreviations used.

WORLD WAR 1

The crashes listed under World War One are nowhere near comprehensive, either in number or in their exact locations and although the aircraft are E. Midlands-based not all of the crashes may have been in these counties; however the short range of the aircraft means that it is probable most of the crashes happened in the vicinity of their home aerodromes during the demanding operations of take-offs and landings. Military aircraft first came to a field at Lilbourne NR, used as a stepping stone on journeys north before WW1 but the first aerodrome as such was at Loughborough LE used for testing aircraft assembled by Brush Electrical and opened in October 1915. Stamford (as Wittering was originally called) opened in October 1916 as part of the Home Defence chain against the Zeppelin menace, the aerodrome being occupied by A Flight of 38 Sqn, mainly equipped with FE2bs, and Lilbourne became a training aerodrome in the same month. These two were joined by Easton-on-the-Hill NR, and Hucknall, East Retford and Papplewick Moor, all NT, as the war progressed. It was the training activities at these aerodromes which gave rise to many of the accidents recorded below, the aircraft and engines of those times being very much less reliable than those of later decades. It should be borne in mind that parachutes were not used by the British air forces until the early 1920s.

BETWEEN THE WARS

There was a massive rundown of the RAF during 1919-20, resulting in all the WW1 airfields closing except Stamford, now renamed Wittering, and used for training. The aircraft were becoming more reliable and the pace of training slackened so that the number of accidents reduced and there were fewer casualties in any case, due to the introduction of parachutes. The RAF began to increase in size significantly during the 1930s and operational types, as opposed to those used for training, began to arrive at newly-opened airfields. These more sophisticated and powerful aircraft, equipped with such novelties as flaps, retractable undercarriages and enclosed cockpits (not liked initially!), increased the number of accidents as pilots converted from the elderly biplanes. In addition to the military crashes civilian-owned aircraft and aerodromes began to appear from the early 1920s on, contributing to the total number.

World War II.

When WW2 broke out in September 1939 all civilian aircraft were grounded or impressed for use by the RAF and FAA. A massive expansion of the RAF took place and the East Midlands became mainly a training area although airfields on the eastern fringes of Notts, Leics, Rutland and Northants did mount operations. All aspects of RAF training took place in the five counties, from elementary flying training on Tiger Moths and Magisters, through advanced flying training on Masters and Oxfords to operational training at the bomber OTUs and HCU's. These last two in particular had a terrifying accident rate as their young crews struggled with the complexities of large and, for that time, sophisticated aircraft, together with flying at night and in bad weather, learning how to drop bombs and how to evade fighters. Fatal crashes at Wigsley and Winthorpe and the Wellington OTUs were far too common, being often due, in addition to inexperienced crews, to old worn-out aircraft as the front-line squadrons naturally received new production aircraft. The Halifax, in its Mark II and V versions, had some nasty flying characteristics whilst the Stirling had a weak undercarriage which contributed to many of its accidents. Most crashes took place on or near airfields as taking-off and landing were the most dangerous areas of flight but 'stuffed clouds' claimed their share, particularly in the high ground of Derbyshire; the RAF's clerks did not specify exactly where a crash took place so those given as at an airfield could have been within a half-mile radius. From 1942 the US Army Air Force began to operate from airfields in Northamptonshire and their crash locations are even more liable to error as young Americans struggled with English place-names! It is also more difficult to interpret US data on their crashes so that not all the incidents recorded in this list may have resulted in the aircraft being written off, some may have been repaired. It is unimaginable that the scale of accidents and fatalities seen in the region during WW2 will ever be repeated, a fact for which we must all be grateful; many of the young men killed saw no operational flying but their contribution should not be forgotten.

THE COLD WAR.

The RAF had now decreased in size but not as drastically as in 1919 as the USSR was seen as a new threat to the UK. Several bomber stations remained open but the number of aircraft and thus accidents were greatly reduced. There was a temporary increase in the early 1950s, as pilots converted to jet-powered aircraft during their advanced training and the tempo of training increased as a result of the Korean war. However, aircraft and their engines were becoming more and more reliable, training periods were extended, much improved radio, radar, other navigation aids and greatly improved air traffic control reduced the dangers of night and bad weather flying and ejector seats offered a much better chance of survival if a crash occurred. The reduced accident rate was such that just one crash became a national media item by the 1970s. Increasingly civil aircraft begin to figure in the lists.

END OF THE COLD WAR

The RAF now paid a 'peace dividend' and was further reduced in size, a process continuing to the present day. RAF stations closed but eastern England did not suffer as much as other parts of the UK and Cottesmore remained a major RAF station until 2011 when it too closed, the last RAF station in the area. However, military aircraft crashes are now rare events so the number is very much reduced; light aircraft are now the subject of most crashes.
