

AIRCRAFT CRASHES IN THE TRADITIONAL COUNTY OF LINCOLNSHIRE 1914-2018.

T. N. Hancock

As a retired librarian I have long been aware that all aspects of local history should be recorded for the benefit of future generations and this is my attempt to cover just one of those aspects; it will surprize many people to know that a minimum of some 3,100 aircraft have crashed and been 'written-off (eg, did not fly again) in the traditional county of Lincolnshire since powered flight began and this list attempts to give the bare details of these - it should be emphasised that these are the crashes that resulted in the aircraft being destroyed, NOT those, of which there many, which crash-landed, were salvaged by 58 Maintenance Unit based at Newark, were repaired at civilian repair factories such as Avros at Bracebridge Heath, and flew again. I use the words 'this list attempts to give' advisedly as the recording of these crashes was down, quite frequently, to the whim of an RAF clerk who may have made mistakes in locations and other details.

It is intended that this list will give a basis for further research to those interested in a particular crash. Newspaper reports on wartime crashes are rare but those in peacetime may carry an account in the local press. Each entry gives the aircraft's serial number its type, its unit and that unit's home airfield (with the county if not in Lincs) and the number of fatal casualties if known; it should be remembered that a great many young airmen died in these crashes (signified [where known] by a number followed by 'k' after the appropriate entry), often in horrific circumstances and also, occasionally, civilians on the ground ( shown as '+' after the aircrew deaths). Civilian aircraft have their registration, type and location of crash given. The full history of military aviation in the county can be found in the author's work 'Bomber County' the 3rd edition of which was published in 2004 and 'Airfields of Lincolnshire since 1912' by Blake, Hodgson and Taylor (1984); 'Combat Ready' by A. Goodrum (1997) is useful for crashes in the Fens; 'The Air Force Memorials of Lincolnshire' by M. Ingham (1995) will also be useful. Great help in preparing this list was given by Peter Parnham, Peter Wilkinson and Mike Stowe and particular thanks are due to Tony Hancock for his great assistance.

SOURCES

This list is compiled from the information given in many books published by Air-Britain Historians Ltd, and the volumes of 'Bomber Command Losses' by W. R. Chorley, and 'Coastal Command Losses', published by Midland Books. Two web-sites also proved very useful for the American WW2 crashes - accident-report.com and www.aviationarchaeology.com. R.Cawsey's 'Fatal air crashes' is also very useful

APPENDICES

These may be found at the end of the list and consist of an aircraft type index, a geographical location index and a list of the abbreviations used.

WORLD WAR 1

The crashes listed under World War One are nowhere near comprehensive, either in number or in their exact locations and although the aircraft are Lincolnshire-based not all of the crashes may be in the county; however the short range of the aircraft means that it is probable most of the crashes happened in the vicinity of their home aerodromes during the demanding operations of take-offs and landings. Military aircraft first came to RNAS Killingholme and Cranwell between 1914-16 and were then joined by the RFC which took over air defence from aerodromes at Elsham, Kirton-in-Lindsey, Scampton, Leadenham, Buckminster (the RFC station was just in Lincs) and Tydd St Mary. It also established major training stations at Scampton, South Carlton, Waddington, Digby, Grantham and Harlaxton (the airfield called Stamford was, in fact, in Northamptonshire and is not included). It was the training activities which gave rise to many of the accidents recorded below, the aircraft and engines of those times being very much less reliable than those of later decades. There were 53 crashes involving the Sopwith Camel, an excellent fighter for its time but also very tricky to fly as its fledgling pilots found to their cost, 38 of them being killed during the last year of the war. It should be borne in mind that parachutes were not used by the British air forces until the early 1920s.

BETWEEN THE WARS

There was a massive rundown of the RAF during 1919-20, resulting in just three RAF airfields (Cranwell, Digby, Grantham) remaining, all used for training. The aircraft were becoming more reliable and the pace of training slackened so that the number of accidents reduced and there were less casualties in any case, due to the introduction of parachutes. Armament training at Donna Nook and Holbeach contributed to the accident rate. The RAF began to increase in size significantly during the 1930s and operational types, as opposed to those used for training, began to arrive at newly-opened airfields, heralding Lincolnshire's major contribution to WW2. These more sophisticated and powerful aircraft, equipped with such novelties as flaps, retractable undercarriages and enclosed cockpits (not liked initially!), increased the number of accidents as pilots converted from the elderly biplanes - witness the Blenheim crashes in the first six months of 1938. In addition to the military crashes civilian-owned aircraft and aerodromes began to appear from the early 1920s on, contributing to the number.

World War II.

When WW2 broke out in September 1939 all civilian aircraft were grounded or impressed for use by the RAF and FAA. A massive expansion of the RAF took place and by 1945 there were 47 airfields in the county, the majority of them operating heavy bombers. However there were also fighter, Coastal Command and training stations. Lincolnshire saw all aspects of the RAF's training programme, with basic flying at the Elementary FTS on Tiger Moths or Magisters, advanced training at the Service FTS (later PAFUs) on Masters and Oxfords mainly, operational training at OTUs on Hurricanes, Spitfires, Hampdens and Wellingtons and four-engine conversion at HCUs on Halifax and Stirlings, then Lancasters as they became more available for training in 1945. The bomber OTUs in particular, plus the HCUs, had a terrifying accident rate as their young crews struggled with the complexities of large and, for that time, sophisticated aircraft together with flying at night and in bad weather, learning how to drop bombs and how to evade fighters. Fatal crashes at Sandtoft, Blyton and Swinderby were far too common these being often due, in addition to the inexperienced crews, to old worn-out aircraft, the front-line squadrons obviously receiving the new production aircraft. The Halifax, in its Mark II and V versions, had some nasty flying characteristics whilst the Stirling had a weak undercarriage which contributed to many of its accidents. Most crashes took place on or near airfields as taking-off and landing were the most dangerous areas of flight; the RAF's clerks did not specify exactly where a crash took place so those given as at an airfield could have been within a half-mile radius. The airfields at Wigsley, Winthorpe, Bottesford, Saltby, Woolfox Lodge, Wittering and Collyweston all lay just in neighbouring counties and some crashes in their circuits could well have been in Lincolnshire but it is impossible to specify which and therefore those crashes given as at one of those airfields have not been included in this list. Mention must be made of the number of crashes experienced by the USAAF equivalent of an OTU, at Goxhill; here American pilots, in addition to the hazards mentioned above, had to cope with a crowded sky, unpredictable weather and unfamiliar geography.

It is unimaginable that the scale of accidents and fatalities seen in the county during WW2 will ever be repeated, a fact for which we must all be grateful; many of the young men killed saw no operational flying but their contribution must not be forgotten.

THE COLD WAR.

The RAF now decreased significantly but not as drastically as in 1919 as the USSR was seen as a new threat to the UK. Several bomber stations remained open but the number of aircraft and thus accidents were greatly reduced. There was a temporary increase in the early 1950s, as pilots converted to jet-powered aircraft during their advanced training and the tempo of training increased as a result of the Korean war. However, aircraft and their engines were becoming more and more reliable, training periods were extended, much improved radio, radar, other navigation aids and greatly improved air traffic control reduced the dangers of night flying and bad weather, and ejector seats meant a much better chance of survival if a crash occurred. The reduced accident rate was such that just one crash became a national media item by the 1970s. Lincolnshire airfields dropped in number from the 47 of WW2 to just Barkston Heath, Cranwell, Coningsby, Scampton, Swinderby and Waddington by 1990. Increasingly civil aircraft begin to figure in the lists.
