

AIRCRAFT CRASHES IN THE SOUTH-WEST 1914 - 2019. T. N. Hancock

As a retired librarian I have long been aware that all aspects of local history should be recorded for the benefit of future generations and this is my attempt to cover just one of those aspects; it will surprize many people to know that a minimum of some 6,000 aircraft have crashed and been 'written-off (eg, did not fly again) in the traditional counties of Cornwall, Devon, Dorset, Hampshire, Somerset, Wiltshire, Isle of Wight, Isles of Scilly and the Channel Islands (and in the sea within 10 miles of the coast) since powered flight began and this list attempts to give the bare details of these - it should be emphasised that these are the crashes that resulted in the aircraft being destroyed, NOT those, of which there were many, which crash-landed, and were during World War 2 salvaged by 67 Maintenance Unit at Taunton and repaired at civilian repair factories, such as those in this area at Barnstaple, Eastleigh, Exeter, Hamble, Portsmouth and Weston-super-Mare, and then flew again. I use the words 'this list attempts to give' advisedly as the recording of these crashes was down, quite frequently, to the whim of an RAF clerk who may have made mistakes in locations and other details. The airfields in the counties covered were –

Cornwall – Bodmin (civil – post WW2-present), Cleave (RAF 1939-45), Culdrose (RN 1947-present), Davidstow Moor (RAF 1942-44, civil to present), Lands End/St Just (Civil 1937-present), Mullion (RNAS airships 1917-19), Newlyn (RNAS seaplane 1917-19), Padstow (RFC 1918-19), Perranporth (RAF 1941-46, civil-present), Portreath (RAF 1941-45), Prawle Point nr East Prawle (RNAS/RAF 1917-19), Predannack (RAF 1941-45, FAA 45-70s), St Eval (RAF 1939-59), St Mawgan (RAF 1936-2008, airport 1980-present), St Merryn (Civil 1930s, FAA 1940-56, civil 1956-present), Treligga (FAA 1941-45).

Farm strips and minor airfields not included.

It is intended that this list will give a basis for further research to those interested in a particular crash. Newspaper reports on wartime crashes are rare but those in peacetime may carry an account in the local press. Each entry gives the military aircraft's serial number, its type, its unit and that unit's home airfield (with the county if not in the South-West) and the number of fatal casualties if known; it should be remembered that a great many young airmen died in these crashes (signified [where known] by a number followed by 'k' after the appropriate entry), often in horrific circumstances and also, occasionally, civilians on the ground (shown as '+' after the aircrew deaths). Civilian aircraft have their registration, type and location of crash given.

SOURCES

This list is compiled from the information given in many books published by Air-Britain Historians Ltd, and the volumes of 'Bomber Command Losses' by W. R. Chorley, and 'Coastal Command Losses', published by Midland Books. Two web-sites also proved very useful for the American WW2 crashes - accident-report.com and www.aviationarchaeology.com. R. Cawsey's lists are very useful for WW1, see his website 'Fatal air crashes'; it should be noted that only fatal crashes are listed by him and some of the aircraft may have been repaired – conversely there would have been other crashes without fatalities but in which the aircraft was wrecked.

APPENDICES

These may be found at the end of the list and consist of an aircraft type index, a geographical location index and a list of the abbreviations used.

Early Times

The area covered by this book was the birthplace of early British military aviation, with the RFC at Farnborough and on Salisbury Plain and the RNAS at Calshot.

WORLD WAR 1

The crashes listed under World War One are probably not comprehensive, either in number or in their exact locations, which were often not recorded; however, as can be seen in later periods, most crashes took place at or near aerodromes, during the demanding tasks of take-off and landing. Thus, many of the below did happen at their bases. During WW1 most of the region's aerodromes were involved in training pilots and observers but the RNAS had bases all around the SW coast from which were mounted anti-submarine patrols, both by aeroplanes and airships.

BETWEEN THE WARS

There was a massive rundown of the RAF during 1919-20. The aircraft were becoming more reliable and the pace of training slackened so that the number of accidents reduced and there were less casualties in any case, due to the introduction of parachutes. The RAF began to increase in size significantly during the 1930s and operational types, as opposed to those used for training, began to arrive at newly-opened airfields. These more sophisticated and powerful aircraft, equipped with such novelties as flaps, retractable undercarriages and enclosed cockpits (not liked initially!), increased the number of accidents as pilots converted from the elderly biplanes. The Fleet Air Arm also greatly expanded during the 1930s, taking over some airfields from the RAF when it became a part of the Royal Navy again in 1937. In addition to the military crashes civilian-owned aircraft and aerodromes began to appear from the early 1920s on, contributing to the number.

World War II.

When WW2 broke out in September 1939 all civilian aircraft were grounded or impressed for use by the RAF and FAA. During the first nine months of the war, the SW was a quiet area concentrating on flying training, apart from the aircraft of Coastal Command flying anti-submarine patrols. With the German occupation of France, Hampshire and Dorset became the western fringe of the Battle of Britain and, although the air battles were not as hectic as those over the South-east, many were fought above these areas. After the Battle fighter-bombers took the offensive to France, flying from the southern coast of the Peninsula, and were joined by the US 9th Army Air Force for six months during 1944, but after D-Day most of the RAF and USAAF fighter units moved to France. This did not mean that the SW became a quiet area as Coastal Command, with some contribution from the US Navy, was still flying anti-submarine patrols, RAF training was still carried out, and the other two Services began to make an increasingly large contribution to the air war and, consequently, to the crashes. On Salisbury Plain Army pilots pioneered the use of small monoplanes for artillery spotting while the Army's glider pilots trained on the Plain and in Dorset, towed by RAF transports. The Fleet Air Arm trained its fighter pilots in Somerset and so the SW became very much a tri-Service area. In addition to all this the RAE at Farnborough and the AAEE at Boscombe Down test flew many different types, some of which crashed. It is unimaginable that the scale of accidents and fatalities seen in the West Country during WW2 will ever be repeated, a fact for which we must all be grateful; many of the young men killed saw no operational flying but their contribution must not be forgotten.

THE COLD WAR.

The RAF now decreased significantly although not as drastically as in 1919 because the USSR was now seen as a new threat to the UK, however the number of aircraft and thus accidents were greatly reduced as were the number of airfields. There was a temporary increase in accidents in the late '40s and early 1950s, as pilots converted to jet-powered aircraft during their advanced training and the tempo of training increased as a result of the Korean war. However, aircraft and their engines were becoming more and more reliable, training periods were extended, much improved radio, radar, other navigation aids and greatly improved air traffic control reduced the dangers of night flying and bad weather, and ejector seats meant a much better chance of survival if a crash occurred. The reduced accident rate was such that just one crash became a national media item by the 1970s. Increasingly civil aircraft begin to figure in the lists and the Fleet Air Arm did much of its helicopter training at Portland and Culdrose.

Appendix 2. Locations.

The place names in this index are all shown in the Philips Navigator Road Atlas, in my opinion the best UK road atlas by far. If a crash location was at a location not in the atlas then the next nearest location from the atlas is given as a reference. It should be remembered that the locations are only approximate and that using the term 'farm' means on that farm's land not at the farmhouse. In the text the traditional counties are given but in this index I have used the current local authorities.
